- V. Claims 17 and 18, drawn to a method of determining the identification of a nucleotide at a detection position in a genomic target sequence, classified in class 435, subclass 91.2.

3. The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Groups I and II are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, the these inventions are directed to different methods that have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects.

Groups I and III are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, the these inventions are directed to different methods that have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects.

functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, the these inventions are directed to different methods that have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects.

Groups II and III are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, the these inventions are directed to different methods that have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects.

Groups II and IV are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, the these inventions are directed to different methods that have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects.

Groups II and V are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, these inventions are directed to different methods that have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects.

4. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group I such as step a) of claim 1 is not required for Group V, the search required for Group II such as step d) of claim 5 is not required for Groups I and V, the search required for Group III such as step e) of claim 6 is not required for Groups I, II, IV, and V, the search required for Group IV such as step a) of claim 7 is not required for Groups I, II, III, and V, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.
